From Lady Liberty to the Seine : A light across the Atlantic .
During the 1889 Universal Exposition , Paris celebrated the inauguration of two monuments that would become emblematic : the Eiffel Tower and the replica of the Statue of Liberty on the Île aux Cygnes . While the Eiffel Tower symbolized modernity and technological progress , the Statue of Liberty embodied the enduring friendship between France and United States .The American community in Paris wanted the French Capital to have its own Statue of Liberty , standing proudly on the banks of the Seine . The bronze statue created from one of Bartholdi `s models , was installed at the western end of the Île aux Cygnes , near the Pont de Grenelle . Standing 11,50 meters high , it is approximately one quarter of the size of the Statue of Liberty in New York .The statue was officially unveiled on 4 July 1889 , the Anniversary of the American Declaration of Independence . Auguste Bartholdi attend the ceremony which took place in the presence of French President Sadi Carnot and an enthusiastic public . At the solemn moment when the statue was unveiled , the French Republican Guard performed the American National anthem .
